The Redwood City Promotion Club will hold the last of a series of successful dances tomorrow evening at St. Peter's Episcopal parish house. The dances have been promoted by a committee consisting of Charles Ward and Mrs. Agnes Miller, and have been held every second Saturday night for several weeks. Music for these dances has been provided on each occasion by the well-known O'Connor orchestra.

The same music will be supplied at the dance tomorrow evening. The dances have proved increasingly popular and a fine program of dances is promised for this, the last of the series.

W. J. DUSEL FILES FOR COUNCILMAN

Well-Known Realtor To Seek Place On Board

The third candidate for one of the two extra positions on the city council caused by the adoption of the city charter which increased the council from five to seven members, has this week filed his nomination papers. The third candidate is William J. Dusel, well-known Redwood City real estate man.

Dusel was born in Jersey City, N. J. in 1877. He attended the public school until 12 years of age, then worked for about seven years, and in 1903 entered Columbia University, registered for mining engineering. He followed this profession for eight years in Mariposa county, California. In 1915 he entered the engineering department of the University of California and in 1916 was made superintendent of the Bear Gulch Water Company at Menlo Park. He remained there for five years, during which time Camp Fremont was established, and the population of Menlo Park increased by about 35,000 men. Dusel was commended for the manner in which he met this emergency drain on the water system.

Later Dusel became postmaster of Redwood City, a position he held for several years, and for the past six years has been actively engaged in the real estate and insurance business here. He is president of the Redwood City Real Estate Board, and is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club, and is active in the social and fraternal organizations of the town. He is a property owner here and pledges himself, if elected, to work for the best interests of Redwood City without fear or favor.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Ellis Ensor left this week on a trip to new York. They will be away about a fortnight.

Indignation Shown Following Action Of Commission

Great indgnation was expressed here yesterday following the announcement made in San Mateo Wednesday by Fred S. Moody, official of the State Highway Commission. Moody's statement was that work on the Bayshore highway will be postponed indefinitely owing to the presence of the Southern Pacific Company's spur track recently laid near San Mateo.

"The State of California has spent a vast amount of money on the Bayshore highway," Moody is quoted as having said, "and is ready to go ahead as soon as the Southern Pacific withdraws. It does not feel justified in attempting to complete the road as long as the present spur exists in San Mateo.

"The Bayshore highway is designed as an artery that will carry a vast amount of traffic at a very high speed It cannot permit a spur track to cross its path. No further work will be done until the present spur is removed.

"The Highway Commission feels that it has a prior right there because its rght-of-way was selected and its plans laid for this super $10,000,000 hghway when the Southern Pacific stepped in over-night and threw a barrier in our way. We have since filed condemnation suits which would prevent a recurrence of this situation anywhere else on the route between San Mateo and Redwood City. Unless the Southern Pacific withdraws its spur and puts in an underpass the Bayshore will not continue."

The matter was under discussion at a meeting of the Burlingame Chamber of Commerce late yesterday at whch time it was hoped that some means to force the construction of the road could be found.

The announcement also caused great indignation here. City Councilman Daniel Stafford, who was instrumental for the gift of a right-of-way to the highway commission by the Belle Haven people, stated that most of those who have given rights-of-way believe that the state secured these gifts by misrepresentation, as the highway commission led them to believe that all other rights-of-way had been secured. "If this road is not continued," Stafford said, "It will hold this country back at least two years. Other developments will hold off until this controversy is settled, and Broadway, which we have spent $80,000 to extend will end nowhere."

E B. Hinman, secretary-manager of the chamber of commerce characterized the announcement as one of the worst pieces of news the town has ever received.

Divorces Gain; Marriage Drops For Past Year

By LAWRENCE MONFORT

SACRAMENTO, May 22—(CNB)—If the path to matrimonial bliss is hard in California, at least the skids to discord and the divorce court are well greased, it appears today as a trial balance in domestic relations is struck.

While San Mateo county had but 197 cases on the waiting list in its domestic strife court at the beginning of 1927, the first of 1929 brought the total to 287, while in the same period the state-wide divorce court congestion had increased the number of delayed cases from 7915 to 14,706.

With these facts in mind the legislature refused to abolish the interlocutory decree this year, holding that to further simplify legal separation would send such a deluge of actions into the courts as to clog judicial machinery for months to come.

Marriage, at the same time, solons decreed, should be made harder. Refusing to abolish the three-day wait clause of the gin-marriage law, they added new and severe restrictions whereby swains and sweethearts bound for the altar must have sanction of health authorities as well as of clergy.

By terms of the Scofield eugenics bill, now pending action by the Governor, youth on marriage bent must answer a questionnaire as to his freedom from certain communicable dseases. Inability to answer truthfully without medical examination is expected to act as a new deterrent to marriage in California and to send additional hundreds to Gretna Greens without the state, declare opponents of the Scofield plan.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wagner attended the charter night of the Merced Kiwanis Club Saturday evening.

ROMANCE LURKED BENEATH REDWOODS

By D. E. O'KEEFE

A large ditch digger at Menalto Park that is excavating for a twenty inch gas main for the Pacific Gas and Electric Company that is bringing natural gas from the company's well at Kettleman Field, near Bakersfield, on Saturday last uncovered a grave about three feet from the surface exposing bones of a person possibly buried more than a hundred years ago. When exposed to the air the bones crumbled into dust at the slightest touch, mute evidence of the long years they had mingled with the earth. Only a portion of the lower jaw remained in tact. The few teeth it contained denoted great age when death came as they were worn and decayed. The entire skeleton could be placed in the palm of one hand and only a few years more and nature's work would have been complete and the biblical injunction of "Dust Thou Art and Unto Dust Thou Shall Return," fully verified.

No wood or metal was visible about the grave which might indicate the the body was interred without coffin and possibly nude for no sign of clothing or buttons that might be attached to garments long since crumbled to dust, could be found.

It s quite evident that the remains of the long departed soul had been laid away over a century ago and during that long history making period had peacefully slept beneath the wide spreading oaks of Menalto Park undisturbed until the spirit of progress had rudely uncovered the lonely grave just a little too soon to prevent Old Mother Nature from completing her work of destruction.

Maybe some dark tragedy of the dim past stalks in the uncovered grave. Perhaps some weary traveler on the El Camino Real on his way from Santa Clara Mission to Mission Dolores in San Francisco was lured from the beaten path to this lonely spot, robbed and killed. The bones maybe those of an Indian and if so they may have some connection with a beautiful legend full of sweet romance and enduring love that was extant in this community fifty years ago. The story circles around the big redwood tree on the San Francisquito creek, the portal of Palo Alto This redwood had a mate that succumbed to the storms of 1875 The two monarchs were the genesis of numerous legends known by pioneers but now forgotten by the present generation.

When Father Junipero Serra established the Mission Dolores in 1776 he reported that the shores of San Francisco Bay were thickly populated by Ohlones, Altahomos and other Indian tribes The two tribes inhabited this locality. The former occupied the lowlands and the latter the hill country. They were deadly enemies, often meeting in fierce combat. The El Camino Real was the dividing line between them, each tribe adhearing strictly to its own territory.

Any member of the tribes invading the territory of the other would be put to death. The ground around the tall redwoods was mutual territory for the Indians believed the Great Spirit dwelt in the branches of the trees and guided the destinies of the tribes. Here both would meet in a friendly manner and hold their fall festivals but on leaving the trees their human feeling of enmity would assert itself and on the war path they would go. The chief of the Ohlones lived at Alviso surrounded by hs family and friends. His eldest son was handsome and brave. One summer day in hunting a deer he passed the forbidden path and crossed over into the enemies territory and when near the spot where the old Stanford home is now located he espied a beautiful Indian maiden seated on the banks of the Little Saint Francis. She was none other than the attractive daughter of the chief of the other tribe It was a case of love at first sight The Indian boy ceased his chase of the fleet foot animal paying his attention to the other dear. He could not tarry long for hs discovery by the chief meant death. He hurried away with a heavy heart for he was captivated by the smiles and blandishments of the youthful maiden and she, too, was smitten by the brave and handsome boy from the lowlands.

The youthful lovers would often meet in the moonlight 'neath the tall redwoods kowng that they were safe from capture for the Great Spirit in the branches above would protect them from all harm.

One summer evening the lovers met beneath the cooling shade of the spirit trees. The moon shown in all its splendor The little Indian girl for the love she bore the brave boy of the forest forsook her people and eloped with him. She climbed behind him on his pony and both sped away to far off Alviso, where they were married next day with tribal ceremony.

The old chief scowled and was furious for a time but the smiles and charms of the young girl won his affections and he soon became very fond of his daughter-in-law. The maiden lived happily with her youthful husband but pined for her people and longed to be with them in the poppied hills overlooking the wide spaces where the Stanford University is located.

That autumn the usual festival took place beneath the green redwoods Both tribes meeting in the usual cold way. The Indian princess was radiant with happiness, for once again she mingled with her people. She sought her father and with bended knee asked his forgiveness and implored him to become friendly with the other tribe. She brought the two chiefs together and with the braves, the two kissed and made up. Tom Toms were beaten, the pipe of peace smoked and the festivities continued far into the night leaving in the morning both tribes went to their respective territories living ever after in harmony. Amour omnia vincit, love conquers all things.

The maiden's love, sweetness and tenderness had made the warring tribes friends that had been enemies for years, perhaps centuries.

When the white man came the Indians scattered. In 1389 when the excavations for the foundations for the Stanford University building were in progress a mound was uncovered showing the burial place of both tribes. A large number of skeletons were dug up and piled in a heap and burned.

From time to time Indian graves have been discovered in this locality and about the bay region. It is well within the realms of possbility and reason that the dust and bones found in Menalto Park last Saturday may be those of the Indian lover of long ago.

New Bill Allows City and County Fire Co-operation

—A new wall of protection against ravaging effects of fire was thrown around California cities today as a new statute went on the books permitting muncipalities to contract with county fire wardens for protecton against forest and range blazes.

Under the measure Redwood City may enter into an agreement with the county, paying a mutually agreed upon sum to permit addtional patrol and lookout forces during the season when fire danger is at its height.

Made available through federal appropriation on $90,000 for watershed protecton in Calfornia will be put in areas north and south of Tehachapi immediately, according to State Forester M. B. Pratt. The money made available, under provisions of the Clark-McNary Act.

Friends of William Lipp will be pleased to learn that he is recovering rapidly from an operation which he underwent at Mills hospital in San Mateo.

Justice of the Peace Edward I. McAuliffe on Wednesday levied a fine of $500 on Jack Mills, hotel keeper of Beresford. Mills was arrested by Sheriff McGrath for violation of the Wright Act He paid the fine.

New Service Station Opened in Redwood

Four brothers, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Kellogg of this city, this week opened a gasoline service station on Broadway immediately across the tracks from the Southern Pacific depot. The station carrying all Standard Oil Company products, was opened for business last Saturday.

The proprietors of the station are J. B., W. T., Jr., W. E., and Terry Kellogg. All the young men are well known here and are being kept busy by their many friends.

In addition to the regular service station equipment the local men have secured a large area which has bee graveled and is to be used as a free parking space. This will be particulary valuable to commuters who desire to leave their cars in a safe place while out of town.

The taking of the deposition of Eudora Willettes by Garret W. McEnerney, representing the James L. Flood estate, was resumed in the supervisors' chambers on Wednesday. The questions asked in the morning by the noted attorney were quite sensational and sizzled with excitement. The taking of the deposition will be again resumed next Wednesday. It is believed that this session will complete the questioning.

LIBRARIANS PRAISED BY ORGANIZER

Sees Need Here For Larger Space For Books

Miss Laura Barton and Miss Clara Shelley, librarian and assistant librarian at the Redwood City public library were praised for their able handling of the work of the library in the April report of Miss Wilhelmina Harper, organizer, who has been re-arranging the library. Miss Harper in her report said in part:

"There were 296 more books issued to the public during April than there were the previous month, and 903 more than for the same month a year ago. This indicates the steady growth of the library. Of the total monthly circulation of 3447 volumes, more than one-third was juvenile.

"All of this active book circulation is ably handled by the librarian, Miss Laura Barton, and her assistant, Miss Shelley. They work untiringly to give the best service possible. Miss Barton lends a willing co-operation and helpful spirit to all matters pertaining to improved library conditions.

"With the active reading interest shown in Redwood City, and with a gradually larger book supply, the circulation is sure to increase considerably. Twice as many new members joined the library this month than for the month previous. The total number was 102, while the March number of new members was 45. With the many new books needed and being added, the problem of where to house them is becoming serious, as there is no more shelf space in the library. A new charging desk is greatly needed to make the desk work far less laberious. In fact, the present building is not large enough to house the new furniture that is much needed, and working conditions are becoming exceedingly difficult.

"It would seem that the only way to give adequate service to the fast growing public of Redwood City is to make it possible to have a new building erected, so that the library may expand and be as a great a credit to the city as the beautful school buildings which are not surpassed anywhere."

Burglar Caught In Local School

James Barry, arrested for burglary of a number of schools in this vicinity, was given a preliminary hearing before Police Judge Albert Mansfield yesterday afternoon, and held to answer to the Supperior Court on the Burglary charge. Barry was arrested by Redwood City police and Sheriff McGrath.

The capture of the school burglar was the result of a clever trap set by Chief of Police Collins. Schools of this district had been broken into almost every week for some months past, and the local police were determined to catch the offender. For this reason a trap was planned and set in a number of schools of ths vicinity.

A very fine silken thread was run around the various rooms of the schools in such a manner that anyone entering must break it in entering the room. The end of the thread was used to hold the hook of the telephone down, the receiver having been removed.

Early Sunday morning the signal was received at the telephone exchange indicating that the hook of the telephone in the McKinley school had been raised. The police were immediately summoned. Chief of Police Collins, Sheriff McGrath, Deputy Tom Maloney, Sergeant Stanley Wood and Officers Fleishman, Douglass and Fitzgerald surrounded the school.

Chief Collins and Officer Fitzgerald entered the school, while the others watched the outside exits. Soon after the two officers entered the building a man jumped through one of the windows, and was seized by Sheriff McGrath. He was unarmed and made no resistance when arrested.

Barry gave his age as 59 years. When questioned by District Attorney Franklin Swart he admitted a number of school burglaries in this district, but said that the list was so long that he could not remember all of them. He began his career of school burglary, he said, as a boy out of revenge for a whipping he once received in school.

STATE PLANS NEW PATROL OF TRAFFIC

Highway Officers To Be Under Civil Service

—Politics, taken out of highway construction in California two years ago, is to be divorced from patrol of state and county roads as well.

Signed by Governor Young, an act placing the newly formed California highway patrol under civil service will be effective when the patrol is placed in operation August 14, Frank G. Snook, chief of the division of motor vehices announced today.

The patrol will be formed of about 280 men now comprising the state and county highway forces, and their retention will be dependent upon performance of duty and ability to meet civil service examination requirements.

Approximately a year will elapse before the state patrol system has been brought to full efficiency, according to belief of motor vehicle officials.

Of present eleven of the proposed developments have taken place or are in the course of construction.

Complainant alleges that its supply of electric energy from its Don Pedro project is not sufficient to care for the demands of its territory, and it is necessary to purchase energy to supplement the same. The complaint recites that both electric utilities have declined to serve the district for the reason that they do not hold themselves out to serve competing electric systems.

Choosing Santa Monica as the site for the next convention, the California State Division of the International Association for Identification in session at Fresno elected officers for the coming year with George Bottoriff of San Bernardino chosen president.

The Legislature, at the personal request of Governor Young, gave final action upon a bill to place under civil service the traffic officers who will compose the personnel of the newly created State-wide unified highway patrol. The bill placing the traffic officers under civil service was passed by the Assembly by a vote of 51 to 9.

The syrup plant of the Sun Maid raisin growers at Fresno, opened in 1924, will be put into operation by the newly formed Fruit Products, Inc., a $15,000,000 merger of eight by-products concerns and one of the major factors in the California Vineyardists' Association program for the grape and raisin industry.

The Palmer-Chase Company, paper box manufacturers of Oakland, has taken an option on a factory site in Richmond Annex, and will move its plant there, if the city council of Richmond grants a rezoning petition pending.

As a result of the intense agitation against the proposed abandonment of the Monte Rio-Point Reyes branch of the Northwestern Pacific, the application for the abandonment was withdrawn.

Leon P. Haslam is having plans prepared for a four-story reinforced concrete hotel building, to be erected on the State highway, Santa Maria. It will contain 100 rooms and cost about $200,000.

Plans for completing the reorganization started last year was the principal business before the California Prune and Apricot Growers' Association at its annual meeting at San Jose.

Portola Water Company, operating in the town of Portola, Plumas county, has applied to the Railroad Commission for authority to borrow $10,000 at seven per cent interest from the Plumas County Bank of Quincy, for the purpose of retiring outstanding indebtedness and to pay for extensions and improvements to its system.

Declaring there evidently had been a misunderstanding by bidders regarding the amount of interest the recently voted $100,000 issue of Red Bluff grammar school bonds should carry, the board of supervisors rejected bids of five San Francisco bond houses for the issue and called for new bids.

When Wells Johnson and his wife left Gerber by automobile four weeks ago for New York they took along "Rags," their dog, an Irish setter. Friends later received word from El Paso, Texas, that the dog had disappeared. Recently it came limping into Gerber, its paws raw after its long walk. It was ravenously hungry and thirsty. It recognized Al Martindale, express agent, a former neighbor to the Johnsons, and has since adopted him as a master.

Bare legs may be tolerated during the daytime but Santa Clara High School girls must wear stockings at night, at least when attending formal school dances, or they don't dance. So decreed school authorities after barring a dozen girl students from the annual junior dance recently. The girls arrived clad in evening gowns and slippers but sans stockings. Principal Charles W. Townsend and Miss Stella Leviston, dean of girls, refused to permit them on the floor until they obtained the necessary raiment.

The Monterey sardine fishermen's organization and eleven Lampara boat owners, formerly connected with the boat owners' organization, have buried the hatchet after a breach which occurred more than a year ago and resulted in almost continual price slashing. Where the war between the two groups lowered the squid price to fresh fish markets as low as a cent a pound on certain days, the price was said to be between 5 and 6 cents a pound now. The reunion of the two organizations is reported to have been brought about by a mutual desire both to establish uniform prices and restore peaceful operating conditions.

Property owners, who passed a resolution asking the County Board of Supervisors to take action in preventing establishment of auto camps within one-half mile of the San Leandro city limits, have been informed that the Supervisors lack the power to prohibit such enterprises, according to a letter received from Charles Heyer, member of the board. These property owners claim that such camps constitute a nuisance and a hindrance to the public welfare, because of the class of motorists that are catered to.

Supported by the soldiers and sailors group in the State Legislature, the Senate passed the $20,000,000 home loan program for California service men. The bill involves no liability upon the state, in that the loans are made upon a basis of property acquired by applicants who meet the requirements of the veterans' welfare board act. California has voted two previous issues, one of $10,000,000, the second for $20,000,000. These amounts have been absorbed into loans. The call for additional loans has been great.

The necessity of playgrounds in Mill Valley for children of that city was discussed at a dinner of a gathering of residents and business men at a community dinner at the Tamalpais High School. Following a talk on the problem by Granville Thomas, director of recreation of the city of Berkeley, Frederick Thompson was appointed a permanent chairman of a committee to work with him in the interest of playgrounds for Mill Valley. He is to select the other four members of the committee. Thomas recommended surfacing of the old Mill Valley school court to be used as a utility court; the construction of a wading pool in old Mill Park; the building of a battery of tennis courts on Boyle Park, explaining that several courts could be surfaced more economically than a single court. He suggested some kind of playgrounds should be provided at central points for children of various ages, preschool from 6 to 12, and older.

The keen eye of Carl Rabe, traffic officer, resulted in the capture of Ernest Brown, 24, and Stephen O'Connor, 30, who escaped from the San Quentin convict road camp at Paxton, in the Feather River districts a short time ago. The fugutives were encountered walking on the highway near Oroville, and the traffic officer arrested them from a description furnished him earlier in the day. They offered no resistance.

The fifth annual community fair will be held in Galt on August 16, 17 and 18, according to the announcement of the directors.

Articles of incorporation of the Yuba City Hospital and Sanatorium with a capital stock of $200,000 have been filed in the office of the Secretary of State Jordan. The directors are G. H. Thurn, E. E. Reeves, J. C. Nason, Dr. R. R. Craft and P. N. Swenson.

Southern California would be given another State hospital under an Assembly bill by Assemblyman Byrne of Los Angeles which passed the Senate. Additional facilities at the Norwalk institute cannot be acquired owing to the proximity of oil wells, it was explained.

Yankee Center Field Is Tough

CENTER FIELD in the Yankee stadium is the toughest middle pasture in the American league to play; that in Cleveland is the easiest. At least that is the opinion of Johnny Mostil, the Chicago White Sox great ball hawk.

Mostil will go down in history as one of the greatest center fielders in the American league. For several years Tris Speaker enjoyed the reputation of being the best middle gardener. Then along came Happy Felsch. When the latter faded from the picture, Speaker resumed his premiership, only to surrender it to Mostil, who now shares the honor with Earl Combs of the Yankees. Mostil has a better arm than Combs, but the latter has the greater speed.

"The shadows caused by the great three-decked stand at the Yankee stadium are tough, but that is not all," says Mostil. "An outfielder must depend upon his ears to a certain extent in playing his position efficiently. He must be alert and listen for the crack of the bat against the ball so as to judge the drive properly. Experience tells him when he hears the crash of bat meeting ball whether he should turn his back to the plate and dash for the wall or tear in for a possible pop fly.

"But it often has happened with me, and I presume other outfielders, that just as the batsman swings, a subway train goes rumbling by drowning out all sound of the collision between ball and bat. And, to make matters worse, during the earlier part of the 1928 season the riveters were at work upon an addition to the stands. I'll bet every outfielder was glad when 4:30 arrived and the riveters called it a day.

Johnny Mostil.

"My sympathies go out to the young outfielders coming up to the big show from the sticks. They have played upon fields equipped with small, single-deck grandstands which threw scarcely any shadows. They are thrown almost overnight into big parks like those in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia and other cities where the shadows confuse even the veterans. It's a surprise to me that they accept half of their chances their first week. I recall the experience of George Blackerby who came up from Waco to join the White Sox in August. He was sent to left field without delay. It's a wonder he was not hit on the head by some of the drives an outfielder accustomed to the shadows would have caught with ease."

Football Stars at Iowa Improving as Students

T. N. Metcalf, director of athletics at Iowa State college, has come to the conclusion that football players at the Ames institution are becoming better students. Metcalf has just completed a survey of the football squads of the last three years. Last year 70 per cent of the freshman players and 92 per cent of the varsity men received passing grades in more than fifteen hours of college work. Records show that freshman scholarship was much better last fall than ever before. In 1926 40 per cent of the freshmen were dropped because of poor scholarship. The following year only 19 per cent were dismissed and last fall the figure fell to 5 per cent.

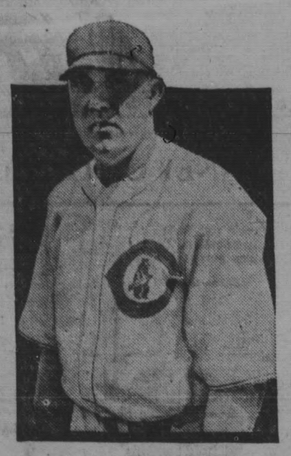
Bill Hallahan Cardinal Star When Has Control

There probably will be a lot of shuffling around in the batter's box when Bill Hallahan takes the mound for the St. Louis Cardinals this season.

For Bill, with all of his curves and speed, is, or rather has been one wild right-handed pitcher. Working for Houston, pennant winners on the Texas league last year, Bill fanned 244 men in 276 innings, but he walked 149. He won 23 and lost 12 games.

Bill was up with the Cardinals once before. His wildness was too great a handicap then.

Pat Malone Wins



Pat Malone, secured by the Chicago Cubs from the Minneapolis American association team, has developed into a consistent winning pitcher.

High Rating Given to Washington Team

Eddie Collins, once king of second baseman, is among those who believe the Washington club is on the way to more than moderate success.

At a baseball luncheon of the Penn A. C. in Philadelphia, Collins cited the Nationals as one of the most improved clubs in the American league, and expressed the belief that they and the St. Louis Browns would give the Yankees and Athletics an argument over the pennant.

Collins paid glowing tribute to Walter Johnson as a leader. He ascribed the hustling spirit and generally high morale of the club to the players' faith in the Big Train and their admiration for him.

McGraw Likes Giants

John McGraw is convinced his New York Giants are a greatly improved ball club and will be in the thick of the National league pennant struggle from start to finish. As a matter of fact, McGraw believes the Giants have their best chance in some years to make away with the league gonfalon. He thinks the Cubs are the most improved of the Giants' rivals and that St. Louis and Pittsburgh will make trouble during the course of the championship race.

President Hoover is said to have displayed one of the best arms of any Chief Executive in recent years in his first pitch at the Washington opening, delayed one day because of bad weather. Mr. Hoover pulled back and sent the ball on a line all the way to Umpire Moriarty who felt the sting of it on his hands.

RATE CARROLL AS WISEST PITCHER

Says Year or So in Minors Needed by Youngster.

Owen Carroll, star hurler of the Detroit Tigers, already is rated as one of the wisest pitchers in the circuit, despite his lack of years—he was only twenty-five when the 1928 season started—and some of his axioms might be worth heeding by the sandlot pitchers who have ambitions to become big leaguers.

"A young pitcher needs one or two years in the minors if for no other reason than to acquire confidence," says Carroll. "Minor league clubs do not carry pitching staffs of nine or ten men and when you get yourself in a jam, you may have to pitch yourself out. In the majors, the moment you wobble, there is another pitcher down in the bull pen getting ready to take your place. Naturally, you become nervous and instead of pitching yourself out of the tough spot, you become more deeply involved.

"But, in the minors, you get the chance to solve your own problems and extricate yourself, an experience that is valuable when you strike the big show. Take my case. I joined the Tigers in 1925 shortly after finishing at Holy Cross, my only experience having been at college and in a twilight league in Massachusetts. I had the stuff, but I never learned how to use it until I had been sent to Toronto for development. There, under the guidance of Dan Howley and Steve O'Neill and, knowing I would not be yanked the second the trouble clouds appeared, I was successful.

"At Toronto, I also acquired control, wildness having been my greatest fault and, speaking of control, every successful pitcher learns to know which is his "control ball" and depends upon it in the pinches. Use the other stuff when you are ahead of the batter."

The City Hall Bond Issue

REDWOOD CITY is growing, growing rapidly, and rapidly also outgrowing many things which ten or twelve years ago were amply adequate to the needs of the town at that time. If the business which is done in Redwood City's business district today were to be confined in the business houses which were here twelve years ago, and handled with the same equipment which was sufficient for that time the condition would be intolerable to both the merchant and to the consumer.

Yet the city's own business is being carried on today in a structure which was designed to meet the needs of the town 17 years ago, and carried on with practically the same equipment, for the size of the building will allow of very little addition. Various departments are crowded into rooms designed to house some particular activity. The police department, for instance, is maintaining an office originally intended as a store room for the janitor's supplies and tools. The city clerk is relegated to a corner of the council room. And the councilmen themselves, are at a loss as to where to put the two extra members of the council after the election next month.

The worst feature of the city government's housing trouble, however, is that of the city engineer's office, where most of the most valuable records of the city must necessarily be placed is in another building. At present these records are kept in a building which is not fire proof. The city is paying rent for this office space every month.

A proposal will shortly be placed before the people of Redwood City to build a new city hall, a building adaquate to the needs of the city. The construction of such a building will cost money. That goes without saying. Yet such a building will be an actual saving to the people of Redwood City. In the event that the plans, maps and data in the office of the city engineer should be destroyed by fire, the cost of reproducing these records would be far more than the entire cost of the new city hall, and would require years of work. In addition to this point, the city will be saving every month the rent now paid.

There are also other valuable records in the possession of the other departments of the city government. These records are kept in the present city hall, but the vault space is not sufficient for their being kept in the fireproof vault. They must be left on shelves or counters.

The new city hall, will cost money, but the money spent in such an improvement is an investment, and one which will bring returns into the town treasury as well as security for city property.

Now Is the Time to Get Ready for School

NEXT fall, California schools will open for the first time to many thousands of children. The event is of great importance, for it marks the first step in the public life of a child as a citizen of this republic. Then, for the first time, he will come into contact with thousands their children who are engaged in the same organized endeavors.

Education is an important factor in our form of government. The American people, generally, are the best educated people in the world. If there is any single attribute of government that we believe in, it is education, and we spend vast sums of money in its advancement. Whether the children who will enter school next fall will make successes of their school lives depends, to a great extent, upon their physical condition. Many of the schools have machinery which provides certain care for the children after they enter school but much time is lost, and progress delayed, if children are not physically fit at the time they enter. No child should be permitted to enter school with teeth decayed, if his tonsils are diseased, if he is unable to breath freely through his nose, or if he cannot see or hear well.

He cannot escape attending school because the law requires it, but whether or not he enters school in fit physical condtion depends entirely upon the wisdom and foresight of his parents. If there are any physical defects in a child who enters school next fall, now is the time to find such defects and have them corrected.

National Origins Plan A Fundamental Issue

"NOTHING could be more vital than the makeup of the future population of this country, and the decision of Congress with respect to the National Origins law will affect the destinies of our country and the welfare of our people for generations to come," declared Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, in support of this clause of the Immigration Act of 1924.

"To abandon the principles involved would be to surrender to foreign blocs, and to discriminate in favor of some European countries and against others," he continued. "It transcends in importance every other question which is now before us, for if we change the composition of our population, then our democracy will change with it.

"We are an orderly, law-abiding people, to whom liberty does not mean the right to defy the Government and flaunt the law, and means more than the opportunity to prosper. Unless we are to yield to the dictation of alien groups whose first loyalty is to the land of their birth rather than that of their adoption, we shall deal with the question as Americans always have dealt with their national problems, and hold fast to the good which has come down to us from the past. . .

"All the National Origins law attempts to do is to preserve our present racial balance, so far as this can be controlled by immigration restrictions. To my mind, there is only one course open. To compromise with that issue is invite destruction."

Build the Railroad

THERE'S mighty good news for northern California in the announcement that the Western Pacific and the Great Northern railroads desire to bring their lines together by means of a 200-mile link from a point in the Feather river canyon to Klamath Falls.

The Sacramento valley generally will cheer this long-looked-for project which means better transportation facilities and the opening up of a new territory.

The closing of the 200-mile gap will bring together the systems of the progressive and growing Western Pacific and Great Northern, with thousands of miles of railroad in northwestern states.

It will provide competitive service between California and the northwestern empire.

It will bring Great Northern trains into California and enable the Western Pacific to reach into the Oregon, Washington and Idaho country.

We look forward to the time when Great Northern trains will roll through the Sacramento valley.

The two great rail systems are ready to begin construction as soon as the necessary interstate commerce commission sanction is obtained. We hope that there is no unnecessary delay. The sooner these two railroads are brought together the better for northern California.

The Water Supply

SAN MATEO COUNTY is in danger of finding itself in a predictament not unlike that of Coleridge's Ancient Mariner when he exclaimed, "Water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink," or as the post-Volstead version renders it, "Water, water everywhere and not a drop of drink." Surrounded on almost every side by water this county is facing every year a greater shortage of water due to the increasing population.

The population at present is about 7,000. Within the next twenty years, it is predicted that this will be increased to 500,000. Thirty years ago the natural subterranean water supply of the county was ample for the needs of the population at that time. It stills forms a valuable source of supply. But the population of this county today is dependant to a large and ever increasing extent upon outside supply.

Nearly all localities of the county receive some of their water supply from the Spring Valley Water Company, some receive their entire supply from that source. This supply will in the near future be taken over by San Francisco. San Mateo towns will still receive water from this supply, but as San Francisco is also increasing in population at a rapid rate, it is only a question of years until the entire capacity of this source will be needed to supply the city.

It is important that this county and if possible that the entire peninsula should be formed into a water district. Such a district would have the right to appropriate funds for a systematic study of the water situation and its future. It would if it were found practical have the right to issue and sell bonds for the purpose of providing this section with an adequate water supply.

There are many things which such a district would have to do before the water supply of the county could be assured. Storage places would have to be supplied, mains laid to districts which are developing and increasing in population, and a study made of present supply and distribution measures. The sooner this is done the better will be the future of the county. Right now is not too soon to begin planning for this development.

A PALESTINE CRUISE

By REV. C. A. PARKER

After a most delightful and wonderful day in Athens we boarded our ship at 6 o'clock and sailed for Constantinople. The next morning we found ourselves in the Dardenelles. We sailed near the north shore all the forenoon. The weather, (Feb. 28) was a bit cold and traces of snow were seen on the hills beyond. As we passed along the straits, officers of the ship pointed out to us where, at Gallipoli, on the north shore, the Turks killed 20,000 Australian troops that were trying to land. The Turks were firing from over the hills where they were perfectly sheltered from the British shells they could not be seen or located.

During the afternoon we sailed through the Marmora Bay and at the approach of night anchored before Constantinople. Some of the passengers went ashore to take in the new sights that evening, but the greater part abode on the comfortable ship, safe from falling snow and harrowing Turkish peddlers.

Soon after 8 o'clock the next morning, we were put ashore by "tenders." It had been snowing slightly for five days, but the forenoon was pleasant though cold, and the snow not deep.

Constantinople is on the waterway between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean. It was founded by the Dorians about 600 B. C, and was not called Constantinople until 324 when it was captured by the Roman Emperor Constantine and made his Capital. It was captured by the Turks in 1453 and took the name of Stamboul.

Constantinople consists of three parts: Stamboul on the west; across the Golden Horn is Pera-Galata. These are on the European side. Across the Bosphorus, westward, is Scutari, on the Asiatic side. The city is very beautiful in situation, with a population some under a million, now that so many Greeks and Armenians have been driven out.

Constantinople is famous for her mosques, small and large. Minarets point heavenward all over the city. It has been the ambition of devout Mohammedans to build a mosque or shrine. The great mosque Sophia, known all over the civilized world, is located in the Stamboul section. It is said to have cost more than $60,000,000; built for a Christian church, but turned into a Moslem mosque when the city was captured by the Turks. Its form is very nearly square. Its great dome rises 184 feet above the floor on four massive pillars.

The first basilica was built on the ruins of a pagan temple by Constantine and dedicated by him, not to some inferior Saint, but to the Lord Almighty, in326 This was burnt in 404. Another was built on its site by Theodosius which lasted a century and a quarter, when it also burned. A third temple was built by Justinian, according to a plan made known to him in a dream by an angel, it is said. Six years were spent in its building, and the Emperor labored with the workmen, angels aiding in the work, it was believed. It was dedicated on Christmas Eve, 537. The Emperor, laying aside his crown as he entered, hailed it as greater than Solomon's Temple.

Though now a Moslem shrine, yet evidences of its former status are here and there visible. Over the altar, in the arches, and on the gates in the vestibule are still seen, through Turkish whitewash, the remains of Christian inscriptions and mosaics. The day may come when this sanctuary, built to the glory of God, will return to its rightful service.

We visited two other mosques, larger than St. Sophia, but no more famous. The mosque of Ahmed, or the "Blue Mosque," is very attractive and magnificent, as is also the mosque of Suleiman; a master work of the most famous Turkish architects, with an interior noteworthy of its ornamentation.

We visited a great Bascilica cistern, or reservoir, having 360 pillars, all underground. There are 32 such reservoirs in the city; not now used. We were shown through the museum of antiquites where specimens of ancient handicraft were seen. Of special interest to us were two slabs from Palestine. One was from Siloam, another from the Temple at Jerusalem. The one from the temple bore an inscription forbidding Gentiles to go beyond that point.

In the afternoon, five of us hired a man to drive us to Robert's College, which is on a high eminence overlooking the Bosphorus, about four miles from the city. The outlook from the campus is magnificent. It was founded in 1863 by Dr. Hamlin from Maine a record of whose toils, in its establishment, is most thrilling. The college consists of 23 buildings. Its value, buildings and endowment, over $3,000,000; its enrollment 700; one half of them being Moslems. The far-reach of its work cannot be est is said that two thirds of affairs in European Turk their education in this co is foreign mission work the Congregationalists.

Woodside P.-T. A. To Present Play

The program which the Woodside Parent-Teachers Association postponed several weeks ago on account of an accident to one of the participants, George Givens, will be presented at the hall next Saturday night, May 25, at 8 o'clock. A one-act play entitled, "Mother Wins" is full of comedy and the other part of the program will be presented by dancing pupils of Miss Mazie Roddy of Palo Alto. As every one has worked hard on the entertainment we are sure those who attend will be more than enjoy every minute of it.

WOODSIDE

Saturday night is the time when, and the Woodside Town Hall is the place where, the Dramatic Club of the local Parent-Teacher Association will present their soul stirring drama entitled, "Mother Wins." It is reported that Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer, Paramount Pictures and Warner Brothers will have scouts at the performance lookng for stars for their coming film productions. There are seven members of the cast but only seven of them are expecting to be drafted for Hollywood.

Dramatic talent is born, not made, and the tonic air of Woodside is well fitted to endow its natives with that fire and magnetism that not only gets across the footlights but reaches out to the farthest corner of the hall.

In addition to this stupedous dramatic attraction, Miss Maisie Roddy, now of Palo Alto, formerly of London, will present her dancing class in an interesting program of solo and ensemble dances.

On Tuesday evening ten of the Woodside Girl Scouts, under the chaperonage of Mrs. Givens and Mrs Christensen, visited the Community House at Palo Alto to view pictures of last year's scout camp and make plans for the coming vacation.

The Redwood City Woman's Club held its annual picnic on Thursday in Bear Gulch Canyon in the forest reserve of the Bear Gulch Water Co.

William Wallace Mein has completed his road building and is now grading and bulkheading the terraces in preparation for the construction of his new home which is to be one of the most pretentious in Woodside.

The large new home of Harold Casey of San Francisco is rapidly taking shape and may be ready for occupancy before the season closes.

The Woodside Fire Department is preparing signs which owners of property may procure at cost, warning picnickers against the building of fires or the depositing of rubbish or papers along the roadside. The Depart met is determined to protect our roadways during the dangerous season approaching.

Very handsome iron gates have been erected at the entrance to the Folger Estate. The building of the gate posts and the erection of the gates has been in the hands of our local blacksmith, Louis Bellmont, and has demonstrated what many of us knew before, that as a worker in iron he has few equals anywhere on the coast. He could make you a lily or a rose in iron that would lack only the scent of the real flower.

Mrs. Herbert Gallagher gave a luncheon on Monday at her home here. Among the guests were Mrs. George Lyman, Mrs. Carl Wolff, Mrs. Alexander Field, Miss Marie Brewer, Mrs. Harold Casey and Mrs. Arthur Hooper.

Peter Koehorst has just completed for himself a handsome residence in the Spring Valley tract He is building a concrete swimming pool that will have the distinction of being the largest in Woodside.

Odd Fellows Plan For Social Dance

The Booster Committee of Bay View Lodge of Odd Fellows will hold another of their successful dances at the Odd Fellows hall tomorrow evening. Good music will be provided. The usual admission of 50c will be charged.

Death of Herbert F. Meyers

This community was shocked on Sunday morning to hear of the passing of Herbert F. Meyers, who failed to rally from the effects of an operation for appendicitis, performed on the preceding day.

Herbert Frederick Meyers was a man of exceptional mechanical ability, an excellent engineer, and a great executive. He was intimately connected with the construction of the Dumbarton bridge, and since its opening had occupied the position of superintendent in charge of its maintenance and operation. The work of adding 16,000 seats to the Stanford Memorial Stadium, which was performed some two years ago with such skill and celerty, was under his immediate direction and supervision. And for years he was the superintendent in charge of construction for the contracting firm of Palmer & McBride of San Francisco.

He was a valued member of Menlo Park Lodge, No. 651, F. & A. M. and while a quiet man by nature, was a warm friend to his intimates, a loving and kind husband, a good citizen, and an honor to the community in which he lived. A man of much ability, just and kindly, and of strong character, he will be missed by those with whom he came in contact in the affairs of daily life, by his loving wife, who has our deepest sympathy, in her hour of trouble, and by a host of friends in various walks of life, who found in Herb Meyers a man always "on the square." May God rest his soul!

Cement People Protest Closed Specifications

The letter siged by 89 employes of the Pacific Portland Cement Company's Redwood City plant, and which was published in this paper last week, was received by the city council Monday evening. In the letter the employes of the cement company protested against the use of specifications in city street work which call for asphaltic pavement only It was the contention of the cement people that specifications should allow the use of cement pavement if the cost is proportionate.

The letter was filed by the council, and Mayor Beeger explained that the use of cement or asphalt pavement was left to the desire of the property owners who petition to have the work done He also reminded the cement workers that the council had recommended that the product of the local plant be used on all city contracts, but that this could not be made binding on the contractors who are free to buy the cement wherever they can secure it most cheaply

MEMORANDUM

The first publication of this summons was made in the Times-Gazette, a newspaper, on the 19th day of April, 1929.

By ELSIE FORD

Today we take our literature more seriously than our forefathers did. The ancient Greek and Anglo-Saxton bard did not trouble to analyze the effect he exerted upon his listeners. He knew that he strongly touched their emotions and truthfully echoed their sense of life and beyond this he was not concerned. Today, however, the writer must produce literature that not only adds to his readers knowledge and enjoyment but he must exercise his ability by showing that it is his method that produces the desired results of mental growth. He does this in various ways, but mostly he does it by long study and careful consideration of the subject he is presenting.

To write entertainingly on the classics, on history, on scripture, on biology, on astronomy, all of them "dry-as-dust" subjects viewed from a certain angle, one must love his work. Not merely love it in the sense that he owes a mission in life from the viewpoint of his advanced knowledge on the subject in hand, which is as noxious in a writer as a mere conception of duty without love is in a married life, but be so embued with an overweening desire to see the subjects in all its lights and shades, its desirability and enthralling interest, that his written words vibrate his desire. Such a passion does Bertrand Russell show in his book, "Our Knowledge of the External World, which has been published by W. W. Norton and issued by the Open Court publishing company. "Philosophy, from the earliest times, has made greater claims, and achieved fewer results, than any other branch of learning," writes Mr. Russell in this new book of his. "Ever since Thales said that all is water, philosophers have been ready with glib assertions about the sum total of things and equally glib denials have come from other philosphers. I believe the time has come when this unsatisfactory state of things can be brought to an end." This book is the result of all of Bertrand Russell's thoughts on nature, capacity, and limitations of the logic-analytic method in philosophy. Brilliantly, forcefully, he tells what the modern man can know of the nature of the external world. In "Our Knowledge of the External World," Bertrand Russell shows how philosophical knowledge may be made as definite as science and mathematics.

Ivan Tattersall has written an absorbing story of lively intrigue and galloying adventure in his book "The Avenging Brotherhood" which has been published by Robert M. McBride. The secret society to which Mr. Tattersall introduces us is made up of a society of highly born, cultured and wealthy members who are united in defense of their rights against the insidious methods of Bolshevism. Why should there not be a Society Nobles as well as a society of the Down-and-Outs, ad what might not such a society effect in the teeth of fearful odds? This is Mr. Tattersall's theme and the result is mystery on moonless nights, high adventure, and mettle proven in times of danger It is a real joy and relief to read of something a little "different" from the usual orthodox secret society of mystery story fiction.

Can a novelist compete with the pschologists in telling the truth about human beings and their behavior? While many psychologists and doctors have in recent years revealed the other side of motherlove, perhaps none of them has pointed so powerful an argument against its dangers than has L. B. Campbell, an American author, in her first novel, "These Are My Jewels," the initial fiction publication of W. W. Norton, a publishing house which for five years has confined its activities to a non-fiction list. Every man and woman whether they are parents or not ought to read this novel which tells the story of an average American family — that goes to the depths and uncovers the essential realities of a situation which is typical of American home life today. Mrs. Masterson, the mother, is an advanced club-woman, equipping her children for life and then protecting them against it — a woman who subtly resents her son's sweethearts and her daughter's babies. No novelist of our generation, or indeed of any generation, has given us the picture of an American family in wartime, painted with such realism and with such bitter irony. "These Are My Jewels" may not win the Pultizer Award of 1929 for depictig American life most "wholesomely," but no reader in search of truth can fail to find it in these pages and be stirred to the depths by this fine story.

Children are going to rejoice over the publication of Esther Brann's book "Nanette of the Wooden Shoes" which has been published by MacMillian. For here is a tale that will find favor with every boy and girl who likes to read about the far-away people in far-away places. Nanette lives in a Breton village and clatter-claps over the cobble-stones with the noisiest pair of 'sabots' in town. Nanette's adventures are charmingy pictured in stories of the strawberries that went to England, the bakeshop, the very proud rooster, the visit to the Chateau, the march in the procession, Bastille Day, and Nanette's favorite cousin, Jean-Poerre, who wanted to be a sailor. And many others, besides, that will please every little reader that takes up the book.

Ink stained pages of a book may be cleaned by dipping into a very strong solution of oxalic acid and then in hydrochloric acid mixed six times its quantity of water. The page must then be bathed in clean water and dried very slowly.

The Community Yardstick

Is it a good place in which to bring up a child? That is the acid test applied to any town.

How can we find the answer? By using the community yardstick—which provides a three-way test of the factors that have a direct bearing upon child life in the community. It will take but a few minutes to measure our community with this yardstick and ascertain whether or not this is a good place to bring up children. Here are the acid tests

1. Do We Give Our Babies a Fair Chance to Live?

GOOD In order to attain the rating "Good" the infant death rate of a comunity should not exceed five deaths, during the first year, out of each one hundred babies born alive.

FAIR Any community in which the infant mortality exceeds seven and one-half deaths during the first year, out of each one hundred babies born alive, would be rated as "Fair."

POOR This low rating is applied only to communities where the conditions have reached the disgraceful state where there are ten or more deaths of babies, during the first year, out of each one hundred born alive.

The infant of today is the citizen of tomorrow—it is deserving of a fair chance. The safeguard of infant life is the least a community can guarantee. Baby deaths are largely preventable.

2. Do Our Children Receive an Education to Fit Them for Life?

GOOD This rating is secured by communities who have safeguarded their future citizenship by seeing that at least seventy-five out of every one hundred children of school age are attending schools.

FAIR Whenever only sixty children out of every one hundred children are attending schools the community is given a rating of "Fair."

POOR This rating is applied to communities where the citizenship has failed in its responsibility to the children to such an extent that less than one-half of the children of school age are attending schools.

What greater handicap can be placed upon a child in its preparation for life, than the lack of an education. Every American boy and girl deserves the chance to go to school.

3. Do Our Incomes Provide the Proper Standard of Living?

GOOD The rating "Good" may be applied to a community where 90% of the families are enjoying an annual income of more than $2,000 per year.

FAIR A community where 90% of the families receive an income annually of from $1,800 to $2,000 is entitled to a rating of "Fair."

POOR This rating is given to communities where a low standard of living is found; where the income of 90% of the families is $1,500 or less.

Every community should seek to provide sufficient incomes for at least ninety per cent of its families so that they may secure the comforts for their children that lead to a healthy and happy childhood and youth.

Folks, these "acid tests" put the problem squarely up to us. Your ideas will be of interest to others. Let's talk it over. No matter how good our standing, it may be bettered, but only through the co-operation of all in

FOR EVENING WEAR

A creation of pale blue rayon satin makes a charming evening frock for a young girl.

Tons of New Paper Money

Washington.—Nearly 9,000,000 bills, greenbacks and yellowbacks, issued by the United States government and scattered among banks, business houses, and people throughout the country, on or near July 1, will be able to go into permanent retirement at the discretion of their holders.

This does not mean that Uncle Sam has decided to call in all his paper money and issue in its place gold and silver, but that on that date he will replace this 1,500 tons of money, which would fill 40 box cars, with a new series of standardized notes one-third less in size and weight and occupying one-third less space in storage and handling.

This stupendous task of replacement is being done by the bureau of printing and engraving in Washington, where the United States government manufactures its paper money. The plant is working night and day under full force to have this new issue ready on time, and is turning out the largest order in its history. It is producing six tons of the new money every 24 hours. Eight hundred and fifty-seven million pieces of fresh, crisp currency are being stored in the vaults of the treasury to be soon distributed to every state in the Union.

The suggestion of smaller paper money for the United States first came from Americans who had returned from the Philippine islands and had become accustomed to the smaller size of currency in use there, which they found far more convenient to handle. When money was first being printed for the Philippine government, to avoid the confusion that would be caused if both currencies were of the same size, the islands were furnished paper money in sizes one-third smaller than that used in the United States.

Extreme care is being used in the printing and engraving of the new paper money to prevent counterfeiting. The faces will represent the highly specialized and artistic work of some half dozen different expert engravers, and the character of the engraving is such that it is almost impossible to match.

No longer will there be any yellowbacks and the repetition of portraits on bills of different denominations. All bills will be engraved and printed in green and black. The portrait of Washington will be on the one-dollar bills, Jefferson on the twos, Lincoln on the fives, Hamilton on the tens, Jackson on the twenties, Grant on the fifties, Franklin on the hundreds, McKinley on the five hundreds, Cleveland on the thousands, Madison on the five thousands, and Chase on the ten thousands.

While an immense saving is foreseen by government officials in the paper and ink used, and the printing and handling of the new paper money, a question which has arisen and yet remains to be solved is the changing of the national bank notes to conform with the new style.

The bureau of engraving and printing has a set of engraved plates for each denomination ordered by the national banks throughout the country. These aggregate more than 10,000 plates, and the re-engraving of all of them would take many years to accomplish and cost nearly $1,000,000. The only solutions that remain open are the extremely expensive processes of re-engraving all the plates, the elimination of the national bank currency after 1930, or the issuing of a universal bank note upon which the name of the bank can be imprinted.

Young People Will Be Young People

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Youth has always taken chances wherever we find youth, and in the eyes of middle-age has ever leaned toward unconventionality. No one hates advice and regulation so much as young people; they are eager to go their own way, and possibly not more so today than they have previously been.

I am just reading Northanger Abbey, written one hundred and thirty years ago, so Miss Austen's biographer says. Isabella, reckless and daring to ignore the conventions of the time, was going off unchaperoned in an open carriage to drive fifteen miles or so with her brother John and Mr. Morland. It was as bad as if a pair of lovers today should park their car on a side road at midnight with the lights out. Catherine was discussing the matter with the Allens whose guest she was at Bath.

"Well," said Mr. Allen, "do you think of going too?"

"No, I had just engaged myself to walk with Miss Tilney before they told me of it; and therefore, you know, I could not go with them, could I?"

"No, certainly not;" Mr. Allen replies, "and I am glad you do not think of it. These schemes are not at all the thing. Young men and young women driving about the country in open carriages! Now and then it is very well; but going to inns and public places together! It is not right; and I wonder Mrs. Thorpe should allow it. I am glad you do not think of going; I am sure Mrs. Morland would not be pleased. Mrs. Allen, are you of my thinking? Do not you think these kind of projects objectionable?"

"Yes, very much so, indeed. Open carriages are nasty things," Mrs. Allen replies, thinking more of her clothes than of the awful immorality of which the wild young people were committing. "A clean gown is not five minutes wear in them. You are splashed getting in and getting out; and the wind takes your hair and your bonnet in every direction. I hate an open carriage myself."

"I know you do; but that is not the question. Do not you think it has an odd appearance if young ladies are frequently driven about in them by young men to whom they are not even related?"

"Yes, my dear, a very odd appearance, indeed. I cannot bear to see it."

And then Mr. Allen, more philosophic possibly than his wife, "But one must not be over particular. Young people will be young people as your good mother says herself.—Young people do not like to be always thwarted."

No more do they today any more than they did one hundred and thirty years ago when Jane Austen was a girl. Perhaps the best solution is not to take their irregularities too seriously but to be philosophical about it as Mr. Allen was. They are going to do quite as they please anyway in spite of our protests.

Fear New Era of Tornadoes

Washington.—The tornado record for the first quarter of 1929 as shown by information gathered by the United States weather bureau here promises another unusual year for these disastrous storms.

Last year more tornadoes occurred in the United States than during any previous year for which the government meteorologists have gathered data. The record for 1928 nearly doubled the usual number of 90 to 100 a year. But the loss of life due to tornadoes in 1928 was exceedingly small and the property loss was far below that of the worst years.

In the first two months of this year ten tornadoes caused 32 deaths compared with only four tornadoes and no deaths in January and February of 1928. March kept up the unfavorable condition, with some half dozen whirlers and a dozen or so of deaths. And the Arkansas tornado toll gives April the beginnings of a bad showing.

As May and June are the months that usually show the largest damage from tornadoes, meteorologists feel that more storms and suffering must be expected.

The Southern states experience their tornado storms most frequently in late winter and early spring. Then the whirler season invades the Northern states. Contrary to popular opinion there is no "tornado belt." Statistics show that over half of the extremely destructive tornadoes have occurred east of the Mississippi.

The tornado is born of currents of air above the ground that differ in direction and come in contact. A condition of warm, moist air near the ground overladen with cold air sets up violent heat transfer and overturning of the atmosphere. A great whirl or vortex results, releasing the pent-up energy of the air. Not always does the funnel-shaped cloud reach the ground, but when it does the low pressure of its center explodes houses, and the wind about the vortex prostrates all that it encounters.

Usually a tornado moves east or northeastward at the rate of 25 to 50 miles per hour. If you see one coming at you, run toward the northwest, as due to the small path, a few feet may mean the difference between death and safety.

Official Courting Room in English Fire Station

London.—Birmingham is probably the only city in the world which has an official courting chamber or love lounge, as the citizens are prone to call it.

The salon of cupid has been provided for the convenience of the unmarried firemen at Birmingham's central fire station.

Except on their weekly day "off," firemen are not permitted to go out of sound of the station alarm bell. Consequently, firemen and their sweethearts had to prosecute their love affairs just outside the station—and in the public notice, they felt uncomfortable, no doubt.

One of the rooms of the fire station, therefore, has been equipped by the city with easy chairs, a library and a gramophone. But even then, Dan Cupid must step aside when the fire gong rings.

The laudable part of the official match-making, however, is that the girls always wait in the lounge until the smoke eaters return from the fire.

Men to Replace "Maids"?

San Francisco, Calif.—The unemployment situation in San Francisco has played havoc with the "stronger sex," in the opinion of the city's old-timers who remember at least a few of the days of '49 and when North Beach was the world's toughest community.

The old-timers' views were aired, in a typically old-time manner, after announcement that the Associated Charities of San Francisco had started a school to train men to do housework.

"It just don't seem reasonable," was the comment of one of the old guard, "that the male folk should have to scrub floors and run them ding-fangled sweepers in order to make a livin'."

"Now I remember when—" and here the gray-haired veteran launched into a graphic story of the time when "men were men" and San Francisco was the "wide open" city of the world.

However, officials of the Associated Charities can see no reason why men should not be trained to do domestic work.

"Men are better fitted to do heavy housework than women," one of the officials explained.

Under the direction of the officials, seven men were chosen to take the first course, and after an intensive series of lessons in the art of housework were graduated with honors.

The men studied house cleaning, use of modern appliances, manners of taking care of floors, and were taken into the finishing department and taught the polishing, touching up and cleaning of furniture.

Then followed ten days' practical experience in homes and, according to the officials, the ability of the men "was simply marvelous."

Should San Francisco take to the idea of employing men for household work, it is planned to enlarge the school and to add additional courses.

Pet Snail at Last Decides to Feast

Pontiac, Mich. — Balzar, pet snail who came to his home in Pontiac by some misstep in his early life which landed him in a shipment of bananas from Honduras, at last has ended his "sulks," and come out of his shell for food.

For several months Balzar would have nothing to do with humanity and the food his—or is it "her"—human captors offered. At last, however, hunger overcame timidity and the feast was on.

It was a quite a job to find out what Balzar craved as nourishment, but an offer of bread, soaked in milk, overcame the last vestige of shyness and he feasts copiously on this concoction.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Taller at Night or Morning?

Between the vertebrae of our backbone there is a cartilage disk which serves to absorb the shock of bodily movement. After being up all day these cartilages are said to be squeezed a little flatter and thus we are slightly shorter when bed time comes. Reclining and rest restores the elasticity and we arise at morning slightly taller.

Pest Threatens Florida Orange Crop

Far worse than a score of hurricanes in its effect on the orange groves is the Mediterranean citrus fly that has made its appearance in Florida, especially about Orlando, where this photograph was made. President Hoover asked congress to give $4,250,000 to check the inroads of the pest.

The Babylonian compass was laid out in accordance with the winds rather than stars, according to a German professor.

Missed Death's Touch by Proverbial Eyelash

Who had the closest call in the World war? Perhaps it was Capt. Curtis Barnes, Seventy-eighth division, A. E. F., in the Argonne offensive. A machine bullet crashed through his tin hat and he was not hit, although it was close enough to take out the left lens of his eyeglasses. Then there is the case of Cadet Fiske. He was in the observer's cockpit of a Breguet, 10,000 feet over Clermont Ferrand, France, in 1917, during aerial gunnery training, when he was thrown out of the cockpit with the machine gun in his grasp. He was tossed clear six feet. He landed flat on his stomach exactly astride of the narrow rear part of the fusilage and managed to work his way back to the cockpit. Then the commanding officer ordered a lot of safety belts.

Ugly Knees (in England)

This question, "Why is it that almost every woman has ugly knees?" was put to me, says a writer in the London Chronicle, by a well-known actor, and it set me taking stock of my neighbor's knees in bus and tube. Certainly I was forced to acknowledge that there was ground for his remark.

The knee, like every other feature (is it a feature?), can be improved with care, and even after a very short time will show results, if treated systematically. Massage and exercise will work wonders with a too-plump knee, and massage with a little cream will turn the thin, bony knee into a plump and dimpled one.

Mad Arguments

Will H. Hays said on disembarking from the Berengaria:

"The movie fight I have just returned from convinces me that the world needs a pact outlawing war.

"The only arguments I have ever heard against this pact remind me in their madness of Bismarck's words when he wanted a war there was no real need of.

"'Well, after all,' said Bismarck, "the lives this war will cost are the lives of men who will be dead anyhow 40 years hence.'"—Detroit Free Press.
